You see, CARDUI may make things lots easier for you in either of two ways: (1) started 3 days before "your time" and taken as directed on the label, it should help relieve functional periodic pain; (2) taken throughout the month like a tonic, it should improve your appetite, aid digestion, and thus help build up resistance for the trying days to come. CARDUI is scientifically prepared and scientifically tested. If you suffer "at those certain times", get CARDUI today.

Housecleaning can tell you a lot about modern water heating...

Of Course...
IT'S ELECTRIC!
JUST HOW does your hot water supply shape-up during housecleaning . . . Spring, Fall, every day? If you find family use in the kitchen or bath leaves you with luke-warm water to finish your cleaning or laundry . . . lady, you ought to know about Hot-Water-By-Wire!
When you have many needs for hot water all at the same time or in rapid succession (you turn that "hot" tap 1,000 times a month!) . . . that's when automatic Electric Water Heating proves its superiority. You never wait for hot water because it's always waiting for you!
Thrifty, too . . . because water is heated electrically at the "off peak" rate of 1c per KWHR . . . you get four gallons for a mere penny! (P.S. . . . No "Regulation W" specified down payment when you buy an Automatic Electric Water Heater!) See your dealer or your plumber!

New Yorkers Share 'Gawks' With Visitors

NEW YORK.—You can tell the tourists here by the way they look up, a bit self-consciously, at the towering buildings. You can tell the natives by the way they look into shop windows.

If you haven't been in New York recently, the latter statement may require a bit of explanation. Two characteristics mark the typical New Yorker: His affinity for crowds and a certain peculiar nervous curiosity about everything.

Combined, these traits make the Gothamite the world's most enthusiastic gazer into store windows. It matters little what is in the window. No display of neckties or girdles is too commonplace to attract a little knot of loyal lookers. And if, as is sometimes the case, there is something going on behind the plate glass, it's as good as a Katherine Cornell opening night.

A chef's helper standing in the window of Toffenetti's restaurant at Times square peeling potatoes or cleaning oysters often attracts a crowd of a hundred or more. A television receiver tuned into a program of cooking advice will draw half a hundred males who look incapable of so much as boiling an egg.

Watch Store Windows

The New Yorker does not pause to watch the blinkings of the complex electric signs around Times square. Nor does he stop to look at the city's biggest show — the faces and dress of the polyglot crowd hurrying by. But let a storekeeper step into a display window and move a dress model from front to back and the New Yorker stops transfixed, gazing at the phenomenon in dumb wonder.

The reporter decided to experiment with this strange Manhattan habit. Walking along W. 42rd st., he stopped and looked casually at an unusually dull collection of pipes in a tobacconist's window. Immediately, half a dozen passers-by joined him, standing there mutely gazing at the $1.98 specials.

Leaving this little knot behind, the reporter strolled along until he came to another window which no one was watching at the moment. He stopped and looked in. As though it sprang from the sidewalk a crowd was with him on the instant. Together they looked solemnly at the three dead fish which the restaurant had placed in the window to lure patrons.

Always The Same

The reporter tried it again and again. Each time he had no sooner stopped than from three to a dozen of the passers-by joined him. It mattered not whether the window display was a sad, red-skinned lobster or a collection of $5.98 lingerie, a dozen strings of salami or a window full of bottled hair oil. The reaction was the same.

One of the most loyal followings in town is that of the little show put on by a notions shop in a corner of the Times square subway station. Three of the shop's employes apparently spend all of their time standing just inside the open doorway winding up children's mechanical toys. At 3 p. m. or 3 a. m., there is a crowd ranging form a dozen to 50 city dwellers standing silently watching the tin cats and toy men doing their simple tricks.

To The Voters Of Appomattox County

The Democrats of Virginia will nominate a candidate for Governor on August 2nd next. There are now five candidates in the field. There are a number of issues vital to the welfare of the People of Virginia, to be considered a d decided :: this campaign. We are convinced, from the standpoint of training and long experience, both in the House and Senate of Virginia, that Hon. John S. Battle is the best qualified candidate in the field. He has the endorsement of most of the State and National leaders in Virginia, and we sincerely believe it will be to the best interest of the people of Appomattox County to support him, and trust it may be your privilege and pleasure to do so.

Improvement of Land Cuts Production Cost

Margin Between Return, Expenses Is Narrowing

Higher production costs now biting deeper into farm profits emphasize the need for farmers to get their land in shape to produce more bushels at lower unit costs per acre, the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee points out.

The margin between what a farmer gets for his crops and what it costs him to produce them is narrowing steadily. Commodities used in farm production have more than doubled in price since 1939. Prices of grain and field crops have declined steadily since early 1948.

The committee declared that "greater crop producing efficiency is the answer to lower farm prices and higher production costs."

Crop production can be increased by "put back" soil management methods and "holding" operations. "Put back" methods include rebuilding the soil's organic matter supply by growing deep-rooted legumes in rotation. They include replacing phosphate and potash drained off by constant row cropping. They also include putting all barnyard manure back on the soil and plowing under corn stalks, straw and other left-overs.

"Holding" operations can include contouring, grass waterways and terracing where necessary.
